The Canadian Chamber of Commerce has prepared an election platform document which takes a look at the policies of the four main political parties with respect to the Canadian Chamber's Game Plan released earlier this month.

This grid is now available for your use leading up to the election on May 2nd.

Do their platforms agree with us on all issues? No. We continue to be struck by the positions of some of the parties that one has to choose between businesses and families. As you know, our view is just the contrary. Canadians' prosperity and quality of life - including the social programs we hold dear - depend upon the ability of our businesses to be competitive at home and internationally. It's important that Canada's businesses have the necessary tools to spur economic growth.

Networking Tip

Just Do The Opposite. Internet marketing strategist Mike Underell told us a story of how he was once 'the guy in the corner' at events. He changed that without reading a self-help book or having an epiphany. He simply figured out that his basic nature was to 'not do.' Not go out; not talk to the person standing next to him. So, he made a decision, "I will do the opposite of what I would usually do." If his natural response was, "No, I would rather watch the hockey game at home" he did the opposite. He went out and watched the game with friends. If he usually didn't speak up at meetings, he did the opposite. He spoke up. Become your own personal contrarian!
